

Individual Status Report

Part 1:

During the first week we agreed on three things. The first being our time management strategy, which was to work a few days ahead of the deadline. Deciding how team leadership would function was our second concern, we decided that we would have a rotating leader each week which consisted of someone who has not done it yet to fill the role. If someone did not meet expectations set by the group, the group decided that the person would be talked to and then reported to the TA if performance did not improve by the next week. Lastly, we brainstormed additional features that we possibly wanted to implement in our application which were, Create Account, Sign In, Log Out, sharing events with other users, Reminders, Event details: priority, description, location, etc., Repeating Events, Adding/removing Events, editing events, Pre-set Holidays, Import Events from other Apps, and Birthdays.

Part 2:

The group accomplished what we set out to accomplish in last week's plans. All Trello accounts were created for the group and linked. The task menu and progression menu were created for our user stories to be completed. The group met and completed work at the agreed to scheduled time. We also listed features that we are going to implement in the application and assigned user stories. Lastly, while we did not decide to implement all the features discussed in the previous week, we did choose four additional features to be implemented in the application, put them on the board and assigned their user stories. We learned that working a little ahead of the deadline took the pressure off us and allowed us to more effectively plan.

Part 3:

For next weeks tasks we plan to distribute the work for the individual user stories to teammates and begin working on them. We will also re-evaluate whether we should re-implement the changing leadership role that we originally agreed upon by changed. My personal responsibility is to handle the "Home" page for the application. So, likely I will begin creating wireframes for my portion of the application. Team members will be notified of meetings over discord.
